As we prepare for the celebration of competition that is the 24th Annual Motul Petit Le Mans, we can't thank our title partner, Motul, enough! Without their support and long-standing commitment, this event would not be the amazing show that it is. Motul, which manufactures high-performance motor oils and lubricants, was the very first title sponsor of the event. You can see their branding throughout the property and witness the superiority of their products as the IMSA WeatherTech Championship cars take to the track, as every one of them is powered by Motul oil!

2020 Motul Petit Le Mans Recap

In the midst of a global pandemic that saw many sporting events around the world postponed, cancelled or proceeding without spectators, the 23rd Annual Motul Petit Le Mans was able to entertain fans and serve as the ninth round of the IMSA WeatherTech SportsCar Championship revised schedule. The 2020 edition of Motul Petit Le Mans came during a historic year for the racetrack in many ways, as it also helped celebrate the 50th anniversary year of Michelin Raceway Road Atlanta's founding.

Capacity for the event was limited, due to continued concerns over the COVID-19 outbreak, but a bustling infield of socially-distanced fans watched the 10 hours of thrilling racing unfold as it all came down to the final moments of competition.

Thirty-one cars spread over four classes started what promised to be an epic showdown that culminated with an unexpected overall victory for the No. 10 Wayne Taylor Racing Konica Minolta Cadillac DPi, piloted by Ryan Briscoe, Renger van der Zande and Scott Dixon. With just 12 minutes remaining in the 10-hour battle, race leaders Pipo Derani and Ricky Taylor came together in Turn 6 and gave van der Zande the opportunity he needed from nearly 20 seconds behind the two to take the win. In LMP2, the No. 8 Tower Motorsports by Starworks ORECA LMP2 07 seized the lead in the ninth hour and John Farano, Mikkel Jensen, and Job van Uitert cruised to an easy victory.

The No. 911, with Nick Tandy, Fred Makowiecki and Matt Campbell taking turns behind the wheel, won in the GT Le Mans (GTL) class – logging Porsche's first victory of the season. Makowiecki was nearly 20 seconds back in second place when race leader Augusto Farfus had an off-course excursion near the end of the race. A pair of late full-course cautions bunched the field but Makowiecki wasn't deterred and took the checkered flag under yellow. It delivered the first Motul Petit Le Mans triumph for him and Campbell, and the fourth in the iconic race for Tandy.

The No. 63 Ferrari, driven by Cooper MacNeil, Jeff Westphal and Alessandro Balzan, took home the GT Daytona (GTD) win, the first for the car since MacNeil, Gunnar Jeannette and Daniel Serra won at Motul Petit Le Mans two years ago. From the opening lap, the No. 63 took the lead and remained near the front for the duration of the 10-hour enduro, with Westphal making the decisive pass for the lead and eventual race win with just over an hour to go.
